

ONE STOP CANCER SHOP

According to the Center for Disease Control and Prevention:

Compared to members of other racial and ethnic groups, Black and African American people have higher rates of getting and dying from many kinds of cancer.

- Black people have the highest death rate for cancer overall.
- Black people have a lower overall 5-year cancer survival rate than White people.
- Black people are more likely than White people to be diagnosed with female breast, lung, and colorectal cancers at a late stage when cancer is harder to treat.
- Many cancers can be prevented. Staying away from tobacco smoke, keeping a healthy weight, drinking little or no alcohol, and getting human papillomavirus (HPV) vaccinations on time can lower the risk of getting cancer.
- More Black men than White men say they smoke cigarettes now and are more likely than other groups to be exposed to smoke from other people's cigarettes, called secondhand smoke.
- Obesity is most prevalent among non-Hispanic Black adults.
- Overall, non-Hispanic Black adults are less likely than non-Hispanic White adults to be vaccinated against HPV. HPV vaccines help prevent several kinds of cancer.
- Black people are more likely than White people to be up to date on screening tests for colorectal, breast, and cervical cancer.
